IMMIGRATION PROSPECTS.

In the century just ended with the year 1920, the United States received 33,266,103 immigrants. Of those, 8,266,875 came from the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; 5,494,539 from Germany; 2,134,414 from the Scandinavian countries; 1,199,746 from Italy; 4,968,448 from Austria-Hungary and 3,311,496 from Russia. The bulk of the latter three groups entered America since 1890, and it is from the countries of southern and eastern Europe that the impending enormous influx is expected. The point is made by students of race movements that the racial character which the earlier Anglo-Saxon immigration gave to the people of the United States is now in danger of being overwhelmed owing to the difficulties of assimilating a nation as ours assimilating millions of new arrivals so different from the original stock. This must be the important consideration leading to decisions with respect to restriction, immigration, if it is held, and not without reason.

Official statistics reveal that up to the outbreak of the war in Europe we were receiving a quite uniform and large number of immigrants annually from the United Kingdom, through the movement of German and Scandinavian ships had greatly declined. This, supported the original stock and aided materially in mitigating or slowing the racial change inevitable through the introduction of variable elements from southern and eastern Europe. Left to choose between and fresh discourses of migrating probably would not come to the United States in large numbers, offering in part the racial dilution for which the earlier kind of immigration is responsible. But we seem destined to be denied a great share of that which would be most welcome.

Even in the midst of war the fastidious British government (understandably) inquired as to the probable result of emigration when peace should be made and it was then decided that so far as could be the British who would not stay at home must be allowed to go to British possessions, desirous for economic and protective reasons. Now the Round Table, a quarterly devoted to British political and economic interests, has made an exhaustive study of the immigration of the race and estimates a billion that most deeply concern Americans. It admits there will be an enormous movement from Europe and asserts that the new type of immigration from the southern and eastern sections is not desirable in Canada or Australia because it would be too heavy to be assimilated. But it will fit by the thousands, and it should, however, be a cardinal point in our policy to see that those of our people who are determined to go abroad do not settle outside the empire. And there may be economic temptations in that direction. If it is true that there is an unusual disposition in America to welcome British immigration.

The disposition hinted at may be taken for granted. Obstacles to its satisfaction which may be interposed cannot, perhaps, be overcome, but in that case our government will have to consider the effects of an influx offering no new strength to our old stock.

MR. HARDING'S ENGLISH.

President Harding does not put some highbrow British at all. It seems he does not use good English. Worse his knowledge of the language is so deficient that he is accustomed to take desperate liberties in the usage of new words. So at least the London Daily Chronicle asserts, and attempts to prove its charge by alleging that "in his election address he invented the hideous normalcy."

This is pretty serious, all must admit. For the effect of Mr. Harding's "invention" has been that this very expressive word has been welcomed by people who can recognize a good thing. The truth is, though, that President Harding did not coin it. It has been in the dictionary for years, not much used, it is true, but ready to serve an occasion might demand and it expressed precisely the idea which the Republican nominee wished to convey to the people. This is clear to most of us, is the only justification for any language. It is used to communicate thoughts. If a man cannot find among the terms commonly employed one that meets his requirements he is not justified in coining an appropriate word? There are an abundance of precedents for doing so. In fact, the man who is brave enough or so "desperate" that he does fashion a new word to suit a necessity is a public benefactor.

The Chronicle says of the president's message to congress that it "contains several passages that would cause a shudder in academic circles." Well, those circles would be the better for being jarred, if they will not keep up with the developments of our language or are not familiar with approved usage of it. The critic complains that the president describes America as "ill prepared for such aftermath." But while "ill" is rarely used, the lexicographer declares that the adverb is "regularly formed from the adjective 'ill'." So Mr. Harding did not err in employing it. But, worst of all, "this message gives us 'hospitalization,' which the English speaking world might surely have done very well without." Yet that noun is "as old as the hills." Obviously Mr. Harding knows English better than his English critics.

But, however, acclimated "purists" may rage over the president's choice of words, he "put across" what he put to use and much of it is good for the British to read and understand.

SKYSCRAPERS IN JAPAN.

The architect who designed the first American skyscraper is said to have been inspired to build the high edifice by seeing the pagodas of China. It is a story that one would like to believe; for we are glad to credit the Chinese with contributions of every sort to the progress of civilization. The legend comes to mind with added interest on reading that the Japanese, determined to make Tokio the New York of the orient, are arranging to put up a number of skyscrapers. If those tall buildings are really the outgrowth of a form of Chinese architecture, we are confronted with the spectacle of a dominant people making use of the idea of a weak race of similar blood to better advantage than the latter itself.

The news concerning Japanese skyscrapers, of which three, representing an outlay of more than $50,000,000 are already in course of erection in Tokio, is a good illustration of the readiness with which the Japanese adopt foreign ideas. The Chinese are more conservative, less ready to copy the civilization of the occident. This doubtless accounts in part for the greater progress that the people of Nippon have made.

OBSERVATIONS.

With some folks the most important creative work is creating a good impression.

The prince of Wales is reported short of cash, which goes to show that a prince is just like the rest of us.

Scientists now declare the "hot dog" sandwich the richest in calories. Once again is the popular taste vindicated.

The person who likes to sleep in the morning can at least point to the fact that he overtook the early wagon when the bird got busy.

The office never neglected to mention gold marks when speaking of reparations. It would be easy for Germany to pay the other kind.

The Louisiana goose trained to catch fish and carry them to their owner also carry a measuring rule along so as not to bring in any under size. This feature was omitted from the news story as published.

HOLOGRAPHIC WILL IS DENIED PROBATE.

The petition for the probate of the purported holographic will of the late Thomas W. Albrighton was on Tuesday temporarily denied by Judge Mark B. Averill of the district court, while the petition of the public administrator for administration of the estate was granted.

The only evidence outside of samples of handwriting was that of one beneficiary who claims that the will was written and signed in her presence.

CORNING WILL BE FOREST AIR BASE

(By Associated Press)
 CORNING, Cal., May 12.—Because it was held that landing conditions are better here than at Red Bluff, announcement has been made by the Mother field officers that the northern California base for aerial forest fire patrol will be transferred to Corning for the summer.

NEW TRILBY DIVIDE MINING COMPANY

D. F. Murphy, president; J. M. Fenwick, vice-president; E. Lang, secretary.

This company has been organized to take over the property and plant of the original

Tribly Divide Mining Company

which has been lost to the old company upon judgment, execution and sheriff's sale. Stockholders of the old company may obtain shares in the upon the surrender of the old certificates and the payment of 10 per share on or before the 31st day of March, 1921, after which date no further exchanges will be made.

The Tribly consists of four claims lying between the Rosetta and Gold Stream; has a shaft 180 feet deep, full working equipment; has splendid surface showings and is well worthy of development. We advise our customers who are not holders of Tribly stock to pick up, if possible, some of the old stock and pay the assessment. It will surely make you a big profit.

ANNOUNCEMENT CALIFORNIA PETROLEUM AND REFINING COMPANY OF COLUSA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

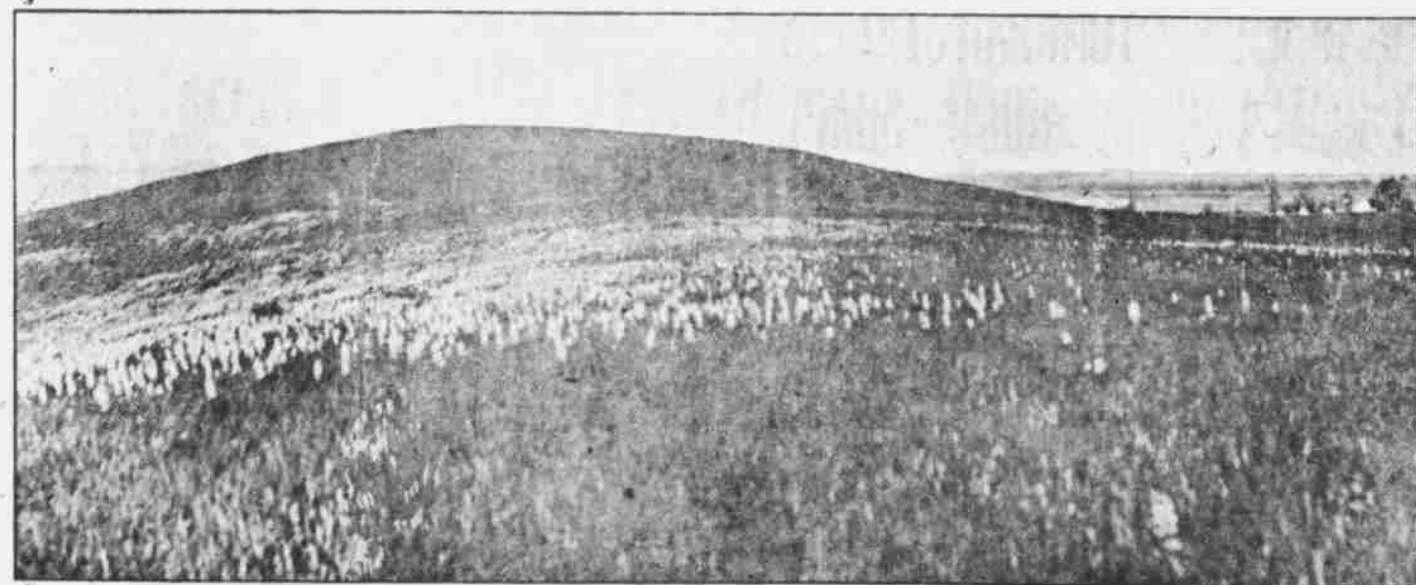

THE OIL INDUSTRY, this company owns a perpetual lease upon 720 acres, right in the heart of the new oil district in Colusa County California and is now prepared to take subscriptions for treasury stock. The directors of this company a short time ago, authorized the sale of 100,000 shares of the Treasury stock at 25c per share, but since that time the company has practically made arrangements with the California Corporation Commission to sell its stock in that state, and when those arrangements have been completed the company will open an office either in San Francisco or Los Angeles and the price of the stock will be raised to 50c per share.

STATEMENT OF MR. T. J. MEDDOCK

THE CALIFORNIA PETROLEUM AND REFINING COMPANY

Gentlemen:
 I take pleasure in sending you a brief statement upon your oil holdings of Colusa Co. California.

First of all, you are centrally located in what is almost certain to be in the near future one of the great oil producing districts of California. Next in

TO THE PUBLIC

After studying the outlines of this wonderful structure in the picture herewith presented and considering its significance in the oil world you should not fail to grasp the opportunity now available, visit our office now open, and see samples of oil produced in that district. The highest grade lubricating oil yet discovered, and brings the highest price paid for a crude product, also specimens of the formation, an oil shale with all sorts of fossils and shells cemented together. Although the district is quite new there are many drills now at work and many more will be working soon.
